Experience Overview

A half day experiential learning experience with marine biologist and Montessori teacher Joan Elizalde and his team at the confluence of Yangtze and Huangpu rivers.

Learn with your children about the impact of plastic waste upon our planet and how much fun it can be to jointly clean up a tiny stretch of mother nature.

Forge new friendships and become part of a community of purpose. Feel that we can solve the environmental challenges ahead and comprehend what needs to be done.

Our Principles

- Reconnection to nature: the longer we live in urban agglomerations the more we become disconnected from the planet. We design experiences which get you dirty and help you to cherish the simple marvels of nature.
- Reconnection to people: Knowledge economies and information overload have glued us to screens. We encourage mobile and computer free weekend and full attention on our interpersonal relationships.
- Interdisciplinary and holistic learning: we take you out of the classroom and deep into nature and make learning a holistic and enjoyable experience for the entire family.
- Instilling purpose: many contemporary mental health issues like ADHD, burnout or procrastination are caused by a lack of purpose and meaning in what we do. We generally look at adults when we discuss these problems, but children from age 4 onwards equally require purpose in their life.
- Zero waste: we aim in all our events for minimal environmental impact.
